Performance

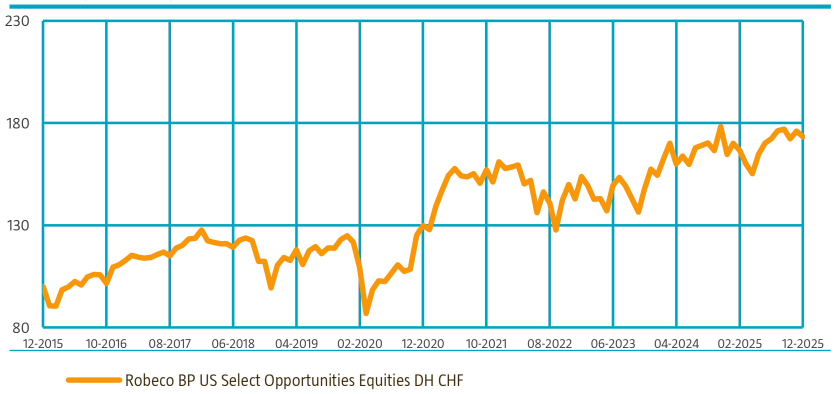
Indexed value (until 31-12-2025) - Source: Robeco



Performance

Based on transaction prices, the fund's return was -1.61%.
Robeco BP US Select Opportunities trailed the Russell Mid Cap Value Index in December, with a mix of stock selection and sector allocation detracting from relative performance. From a stock selection perspective, informational technology and healthcare had the largest negative impact, as InterDigital in the tech sector fell 11% and healthcare company Cencora declined 8%. Avoiding some of the high multiple and unattractive names in both sectors also weighed on relative returns. On a positive note, stock selection was strong in the financials sector with the fund's largest holding, Ameriprise Financial, returning close to 8% for the month. From a sector allocation standpoint, having no exposure to communication services was the main detractor, while underweight exposure to utilities added most value.

Market development

US stocks finished December on a mostly positive note, against a backdrop of steadily rising expectations for GDP growth, contained inflation, and a further interest rate cut by the Federal Reserve. Performance among various segments was mixed; value stocks outperformed growth stocks for a second consecutive month – with growth stocks declining across the capitalization spectrum – and large-company stocks generally outperformed small-cap and midsized stocks.

Expectation of fund manager

The consensus outlook for US equities among Wall Street analysts remains positive heading into 2026, bolstered by accommodative fiscal, monetary, and regulatory policies, and an expectation that the AI trade will not falter and drag down broader sentiment. Some analysts note risks to these assumptions, including continued concerns about an AI bubble, a worsening labor market/consumer, and less monetary policy accommodation than now anticipated. We believe there continue to be ample opportunities for stock picking in this environment – particularly as investors look beyond high-priced technology stocks – and we look forward to providing you with updates in the coming months.
