Market development

The Bloomberg Global Aggregate Corporates Index posted a credit return of -0.22%, as credit spreads widened from 85 to 93 bps. The unhedged total return was -2.85%, as underlying government bond yields increased substantially and FX movements detracted too. March 2026 was dominated by a sharp global risk-off move triggered by a major escalation in the US-Israel conflict with Iran and resulting disruptions around the Strait of Hormuz. Credit markets delivered negative excess returns as spreads widened on higher energy-driven inflation risks, with Europe underperforming versus the US and high yield underperforming versus investment grade. Equity markets also sold off across regions: US equities fell around 5%, European equities declined more sharply, and emerging markets posted double-digit losses. Government bond markets also weakened, with US and German 10-year yields rising about 35 bps, reflecting higher inflation expectations rather than stronger growth. Both the Fed and the ECB held policy rates steady in March, but shifted to a hawkish stance, effectively pricing out 2026 rate cuts. Oil prices surged dramatically, rising by more than 60% during the month.

- The value of shares is sensitive to market fluctuations, instrument prices, and changes in political, economic, or market conditions. Corporate bonds are more risky and volatile investments compared to government bonds.
- The fund may use derivatives to achieve its investment objectives. These instruments can create leverage, increasing the fund's exposure to market fluctuations.
- A (derivative) counterparty may fail to fulfil its obligations. Counterparty risk is reduced by exchanging collateral.
- The fund is managed using quantitative models. Materialisation of the model risk may adversely affect fund performance.
- Sustainability risk factors may negatively impact investment returns. This fund promotes ESG characteristics but does not have a sustainability objective.
