

A Softer Month for Credit Markets

- Credit markets stayed resilient despite volatility
- Outlook stays constructive but tight spreads leave little buffer against shocks
- Portfolio keeps neutral beta, favouring higher-quality credits

Credit markets delivered positive performance, supported by falling government yields, while credit excess returns were more muted as spreads edged wider. Investment grade proved resilient despite headline volatility and policy uncertainty. Market developments were mixed, with uneven equity performance, renewed trade tensions and higher energy prices adding noise, but solid fundamentals and steady demand continued to underpin overall credit conditions.

Market developments

February was constructive for credit, with total returns largely driven by the rally in core rates, as resilient macro data supported sentiment despite persistent headline volatility. US activity indicators remained firm, although stickier inflation tempered expectations for near-term Fed easing. Credit spreads were broadly stable but softened modestly toward month-end amid rising geopolitical and policy uncertainty.

Equity performance was mixed, with Europe extending its rally and Japan reaching new highs, while US equities lagged following a sharp correction in software and broader mega cap technology, reflecting evolving AI narratives and more cautious positioning. Trade developments resurfaced after a US Supreme Court ruling overturned prior tariffs, prompting renewed policy action and uncertainty. Meanwhile, escalating Middle East tensions lifted energy prices late in the month, although market closures limited the immediate impact on asset prices. Overall, supportive fundamentals and resilient demand continued to anchor credit markets despite episodic volatility.

Portfolio positioning

Credit beta was kept close to 1. Positioning across rating buckets reflects beta positioning, sector themes and issuer selection. Exposure to A-rated bonds increased and exposure to BBB-rated bonds declined during the period. The portfolio is underweight BBB- and A-rated bonds and overweight BB- and AAA-rated bonds.

Exposure by currency of denomination is influenced by relative value considerations at the aggregate level, but more typically reflects sector themes and issuer selection. Over the month, exposure to EUR-denominated paper decreased, while exposure to USD-denominated paper increased. The portfolio remains underweight

USD-denominated bonds and overweight EUR- and GBP-denominated bonds, with all currency exposure hedged back to the benchmark by default.

Sector positioning takes into account not only portfolio weights but also spreads and durations (DTS). On this basis, the portfolio maintains an underweight in corporate risk, driven primarily by positions in energy, consumer non cyclical and capital goods. This is offset by an overweight in communications, where the focus remains on defensive, non-cyclical issuers such as Charter, Cellnex and T-Mobile. Part of the sector underweights reflects issuers with negative SDG scores.

The most relevant issuer positions are assessed in terms of risk points (weight x spread x duration), with the largest exposures consisting of a mix of financials and industrials, and often more than one bond held within the same issuer.

Performance

The Bloomberg Global Aggregate Corporate Bond Index returned 0.95% in February (EUR hedged). Credit spreads moved wider over the period, with US investment grade widening by 11 bps and EUR investment grade by 10 bps, ending the month at 83 bps and 82 bps, respectively. Government bond yields declined, with the 10-year US Treasury falling 30 bps to 3.94% and the 10-year Bund 20 bps lower at 2.64%. As a result, total returns were driven mainly by the rally in underlying rates, while credit excess returns were negative for the month.

The portfolio delivered strong outperformance versus the benchmark before fees during the month. Beta positioning detracted modestly from performance, as average beta was slightly above one in a period of negative credit excess returns. This was more than offset by very strong issuer selection, which accounted for the majority of the outperformance. At the single-name level, performance was driven by a number of strong contributors, with notable positive contributions from Cellnex Telecom, Charter, EPH International and NextEra Energy.

Year-to-date, the index delivered a credit return of -0.26% as credit spreads widened, while the euro-hedged total return reached 1.23% due to a substantial decline in underlying government bond yields. The fund outperformed by 12 bps, posting a return of 1.35% versus 1.23% for the benchmark. Performance was primarily driven by strong issuer selection, which delivered a meaningful positive contribution, while beta allocation detracted somewhat. Sector allocation added value, mainly reflecting overweights in agency exposures. Rating allocation also contributed positively, driven by the overweight in BB-rated bonds, while. Currency allocation supported performance due to the overweight in EUR-denominated paper, although the underweight in CAD bonds slightly detracted. Active positioning in CDX/iTraxx added to the performance. SDG score allocation was neutral.

Outlook

Credit markets enter 2026 supported by solid macro fundamentals, although tight valuations leave the setup fragile. Global growth remains constructive, underpinned by AI-related capex and gradual policy easing. The US economy continues to show momentum, but softer labour data and political noise around the Fed introduce additional uncertainty. Europe appears steadier, supported by benign inflation, healthy balance sheets and supportive policy, while emerging markets remain resilient, although uncertainty around China stimulus and rich valuations warrant selectivity. With spreads near historic tights, there is limited cushion should data disappoint or event risk rise. A larger supply pipeline, ranging from hyperscalers to M&A financing, is likely to test technicals and risk budgets even if demand remains firm.

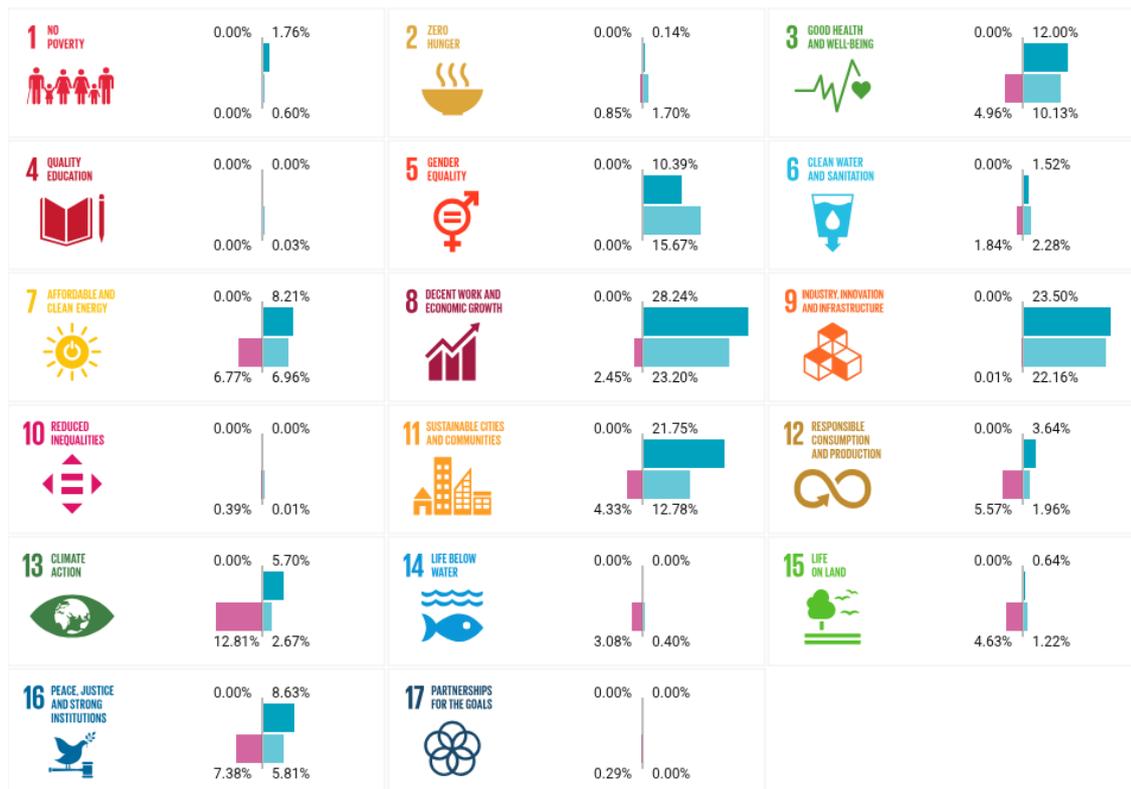

Against this backdrop, we remain disciplined, favouring higher-quality investment grade, shorter spread duration and a conservative beta stance. We limit exposure to long-dated USD credit and remain selective in technology linked to heavy AI spending. In high yield, we focus on BB- and B-rated bonds, avoid distressed segments and target idiosyncratic carry. We prefer European credit and bank capital, while maintaining a selective and valuation-aware approach to emerging markets. Overall, fundamentals and technicals remain supportive, but tight spreads leave little margin for error, reinforcing the need for patience.

Sustainability

However, our holdings in the telecom and technology sectors also contribute positively to SDG 8 (decent work and economic growth) and SDG 9 (industry, innovation and infrastructure).
